Aging, Media, and Culture C. Lee Harrington, Denise Bielby, Anthony R. Bardo

The intersections of aging, media, and culture are under-explored given trends in population aging, rapid increases in the mediation of everyday life, and the growing cultural significance of media consumption at the global level. This book brings together an international collection of critical scholars, both well-established and up-and-coming, from the various academic disciplines that share a common interest in the future study of aging and media. This anthology of original articles integrates aging theory and media studies through a study of core issues including the media's influence on the construction of "old age," the reciprocal influence of aging on media industries, age-based identities in a mediated world, issues of gender and sexuality in an aging society, and the practical implications of a more integrated approach between the two fields. The chapters explore the intersections between aging and media in the realms of advertising/marketing, television, film, music, celebrity and social media, among others.

William McCoy:

As a college student exactly feel bored to help reading. If their teacher requested them to go to the library in order to make summary for some guide, they are complained. Just minor students that has reading's spirit or real their passion. They just do what the trainer want, like asked to go to the library. They go to there but nothing reading really. Any students feel that reading through is not important, boring and also can't see colorful images on there. Yeah, it is being complicated. Book is very important for you. As we know that on this age, many ways to get whatever we wish. Likewise word says, many ways to reach Chinese's country. So , this Aging, Media, and Culture can make you sense more interested to read.
